

Career Goals: One of the most appealing things about FP is the opportunity to educate. I believe education can go a long way toward establishing and maintaining a healthy individual. I intend to be actively involved in educating my community, especially underserved and minority populations about various health topics. I would like to reach larger audiences as well, therefore I intend to seek a MPH and a fellowship in preventative medicine and get involved in creating awareness campaigns and health initiatives. I would like to practice in an inner city while being affiliated with an academic program so I can do research and teach in the summers. I would like to visit underdeveloped countries assessing what are the needs of the community and finding solutions to their health concerns

Ultimately, I would like to practice international and urban medicine. I hope to accomplish this by being actively involved in public health policy and legislation about the practice of medicine. Therefore, I will be able to help serve and improve society as well as humanity.
